

Neoliberal Dreams, Human Rights Discourse, and Globalization: The Making of Iranian Sexual, Religious, and Political Refugees

Global Education Open Seminar Series

A discussion with:

Dr. Navid Fozi, Assistant Professor of Cultural Anthropology at Bridgewater State University. His research explores minorities, migration, and emergent forms of pluralism and nationalism in Iran and its diasporas. He was previously a Visiting Fellow at Harvard Law School, a US-Fulbright Scholar at University of Malaya and a Postdoctoral Fellow at National University of Singapore.

Hosted by Dr. Joshua Rickard, Anthropologist

Center for International Education Lounge

6/30 (金) 6限目 18:10-19:40

This discussion is about Iranian asylum seekers in Turkey, they include political dissidents, LGBTQ community members and ethno-religious minorities. Focusing on issues such as citizenship rights, border crossing and right of asylum and transnational migration, Dr. Fozi's research explores diasporic identity formations across national, geographical, political, religious and gender boundaries.

Admission is free of charge. No registration required.

Language: English

For more information, contact Dr. Rickard at: rickard@kumamoto-u.ac.jp

多言語文化総合教育棟

熊本大学
Kumamoto University

